COLORADO LABOR COULCIL COLLECTION. 106.5 LINEAR FEET, RECORDS

ABSTRACT

The Colorado Labor Council was formed as the state AFL and CIO at the time of the merger of the two in 1955. The CLC was one of the founders of Denver and Pueblo's Job Opportunity Centers; sponsored the weekly television program "Labor Language", and has involved itself with numerous labor, social, and political problems of the state. The collection contains correspondence concerning the Job Opportunity Centers, the TV program and a wide variety of social issues.

HISTORICAL SKETCH

In December 1955 the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations merged to become the AFL – CIO. The merger was a long range result of President Roosevelt’s New Deal measure, the National Labor Relations Act (NLRA) which in 1936 recommended that the labor combines act as one. Less than a decade and a half later Congress passed the Taft-Hartley amendments to the NLRA. Taft-Hartley drove unions to unite with a common objective. Organized labor wanted the Taft-Hartley act undone but the only way to address this was to unite the two largest labor groups together. Not all unions supported this coming together; the Teamsters, Longshoremen, auto-workers, and miners were among the 50 that are still not affiliated with the AFL – CIO. The Committee on Political Education (COPE), one of the departments of the AFL – CIO, raises funds from members of affiliated unions for use in political action. COPE also collects data on candidates on federal offices in support of pro-labor campaigns and writes a monthly bulletin to provide updates on legislation in Congress.¹

The Taft-Hartley Act of 1947 said that labor relations of enterprises engaged in interstate commerce, and nullified parts of the Federal Anti-Injunction Act of 1932. The act established control of labor disputes by enlarging the NLRB and providing that the organization must, before terminating a collective-bargaining agreement, serve notice on the other party and on a government mediation service. Government was empowered to obtain an 80-day injunction against any strike that it determined might endanger the nation’s health or safety. The act also prohibited jurisdictional strikes (disputes between two unions over which should act as the bargaining agent for the employees) and secondary boycotts (boycott against an already organized company doing business with another company that a union is trying to organize), declared that it did not extend protection to workers on wildcat strikes (sudden and unofficial), outlawed the closed shop, and permitted the union shop only on a vote of a majority of the employees. Most of the collective-bargaining provisions were retained, with the extra provision that a union before using the facilities of the NLRB must file with the government, and that union officers are not communists. The act also forbade unions to contribute to political campaigns. Though Truman tried to veto the act it still became law. There were many objections from a range of Labor leaders such as William Green, the President of the AF of L in 1950. Green wrote in the Colorado State Federation of Labor Official Year Book, “The Taft-Hartley Law is a definite abridgement of our American ideals and our prerogatives as free American citizens. We will not, therefore, accept as final the un-American restrictions which have been imposed upon America’s workers through the enactment of legislation abridging our fundamental rights”.² George Meany in the same issue stated, “It is a hindrance to the working people of our nation and it is a handicap to our government in the contest going on all over the world between the principles of liberty, as exemplified by America, and the cruel devices of modern tyranny, as exemplified by Soviet Russia”.³

The AFL-CIO, a federation of affiliates, is made up of 115 national and international unions. The AFL-CIO has biannual conventions with affiliated delegated bodies, and has quarterly executive meeting made up of 35 council members. From the AFL-CIO there are program departments and administrative departments, as well as state central bodies like the CLC, as well as the 47,000 local unions of these national and international unions. These local unions have the option of being affiliated with the state and/or local central bodies of the AFL-CIO or remaining unaffiliated.

Labor laws have been put in place to assist in the development and growth of our nations unions. The first is the Workmen's Compensation Act which was first adopted by Colorado in 1915. This act wanted to provide a safe work environment, safe tools, enforce reasonable rules, service suitable employees, and to educate on unknown dangers. This act established such rules to give workers what they deserved in case of accident:

- Assumption of risk. By taking a job the employee has accepted normal risk in a normal job.
- Contributory negligence. Injured had been negligent which contributed to the accident.
- Fellow servant. Fellow employees were responsible by there conduct for the accident.

At the turn of the century the Employers Liability Laws were emplaced to modify the judicial procedures in mostly in the degree and burden of proof required of the employee. Another help in labor was the Occupational Disease Act. This act was like the Workmen's Comp Act in that it helped out but in diseases contracted act work through chemicals like carbon monoxide, or anthrax. The Colorado Employment Security Act was declared a "public policy, that economic insecurity due to unemployment is a serious menace to the health, morals and welfare of the people", said the Labor - Management Relations in Colorado. The Colorado Child Labor Laws were to declare that anyone 16 and younger cannot gain employment if it could be headrest to there health and age and school certificates are required before employment. Hours must be no more than 8 hours a day and 48 hours a week and not after 8:00 pm. The exception of the "little merchants" like selling newspapers or magazines, are not covered in this law. The minimum Wages and Maximum Hours Law as of 1956 says that in Laundry Industries is between $.80 - $.60 an hour and overtime is more than 8 hours a day and 44 hours a week. In Public Housekeeping is $.80 - $.60 per hour with now meals. $.75 - $.55 per hour with one meal. $.60 - $.40 per hour with more than one meal. Finally $.55 - $.35 per hour with full maintenance. The Federal Wage and Hour Law only applies to employees who engage in commerce or the production of goods for commerce. This act provides them with time and a half for hours over 40 a week. And minimum wage is $1.00 per hour and the maximum hour is 40 with time and a half for overtime. It also stipulates that trips to the bathroom, attending meetings or lectures, short meals (15 - 20 min) rest periods of 20 minutes or less, getting first aid training, waiting for unloading or loading vehicles, waiting for broken machinery to be repaired, and waiting for materials to be furnished must be allotted for. And the Laws against Discrimination are the Colorado Fair Employment practices Act gives the right to all people to work in a fair and respected atmosphere. The Colorado Labor Council is required to abide by the Colorado Labor Peace Act passed in 1943. This act is for employers with eight or more employees. It lays out protection of employees whether union or non-union, Employers Restrictions, union Restraints, and Administrative Procedures. This act became a model for the provisions made to the Taft-Hartley Act in 1947.

The 1972 Presidential campaign pitting the incumbent, Richard Nixon, against the Democrat challengers created a major controversy between the AFL-CIO and CLC. The leaders of the AFL-CIO decided not to endorse any candidate in the election. However, the Colorado Labor Council was very adamant about supporting George McGovern as the only person who could really challenge Nixon. The AFL-CIO was ambivalent on the topic of Nixon, because of the rocky history from the case of the American workers vs. Richard M. Nixon. In July and August of 1972 the COPE also voted to support McGovern. AFL-CIO President Meany wrote a letter telling CLC that they needed to align with the rest of the AFL-CIO, but nothing about their support or non-support of candidates. On August 17, 1972 the Colorado Board stood by the COPE by a 28-1 vote even though Meany demanded four days earlier that they rescind their endorsement. The Colorado Labor Council did not comply with Meany because: in the AFL-CIO constitution states that a ventral body, such as the CLC, is an affiliate and therefore not directly subordinate. The second reason is that 58 of 59 resolutions of the AFL-CIO in the years before 1972 had concluded that the President Nixon should be “dumped”. Therefore, the CLC said that the AFL-CIO had no right to order them to rescind their action. CLC received federal protection from trustees on October 2, 1972 Meany and the AFL-CIO retaliated by ordered unions to stop financial payments to CLC. Even with Meany’s order about half of the Colorado Council’s Local affiliates were still paying, defying the orders of their parent unions. By November 3, 1973, due to the economic boycott, the CLC was reluctantly forced to give in and stop their independent stand against Meany. The ironies were self-evident: what CLC had said about Nixon’s administration in 1972 had become quite apparent by the middle of 1973, during the Watergate investigation. The bulk of the rank and file membership and leadership in Colorado still supported the CLC stance but found their relationship with their respective international unions threatened, and no state labor organization can perform proper services for its affiliates if its income is reduced to almost nothing and competent staff is forced out.

The CLC encompasses many more unions and people than its original organization. They have made considerable contributions to public health and work environments and through their organization have provided opportunities to otherwise powerless and voiceless workers.
