38. Claudius Ptolemaeus Geographia, 1511, Bernardo Silvano of Eboli. facsimile, Oversize 2, G 1005, 1969 “Earliest edition of Ptolemy’s Geographia in which text and maps were revised throughout in the light of modern knowledge; and it is the 2nd ed. to include a modern world map. Drawing in the ‘experience of the marines of our time’, the editor Bernardo Silvano, corrected Ptolemy’s data of latitude and longitude in the text and he remodeled the outlines in the maps, but without changing the nomenclature. Silvano’s world map, on a heart-shaped projection, depicts the great discoveries in the East and West. The place names of the maps were printed from metal type inserted in the wood blocks, and it is the earliest atlas in which the maps were printed in two colours, red being used for names of more important features, e.g. countries and seas.

39. Jedediah Smith and his Maps of the American West, by Dale L. Morgan and Carl I. Wheat, Oversize 2 F 592 S652, 1954. He was the early West’s greatest single explorer, almost for a century a forgotten figure. The primary cause of this failure to accord to Jedediah his appropriate place in the West’s unfolding lay in the fact that he met death at the hands of Comanche marauders while still only 32 years of age before he published his work.
